Discussion On Preamble of Indian Constitution: Realizing The Constitutional Vision

25th November 2023

The Research and Publication cell organized a discussion on the theme, "Preamble of Indian Constitution: Realizing The Constitutional Vision", to mark the celebration of Constitution Day. This event took place on the 25th November, 2023 at Symbiosis Law School, Nagpur. The discussion aimed to initiate dialogue about the various facets of the Preamble to the Constitution of India and its vision. The event saw the active participation of the LL. M students of the batch 2023-2024, who engaged in an active discussion understanding the different aspects of the spirit of the Indian Constitution.

The commencement of the discussion featured a concise overview of the Preamble presented by Prof. Parth Sharma, Faculty In-charge of the Research and Publication Cell at SLS Nagpur. Subsequently, he steered the discourse, elucidating its objectives to the participants. He elucidated the relevance and significance of constitutionalism, contextualizing the historical and social backdrop against which the Preamble was conceptualized and adopted.

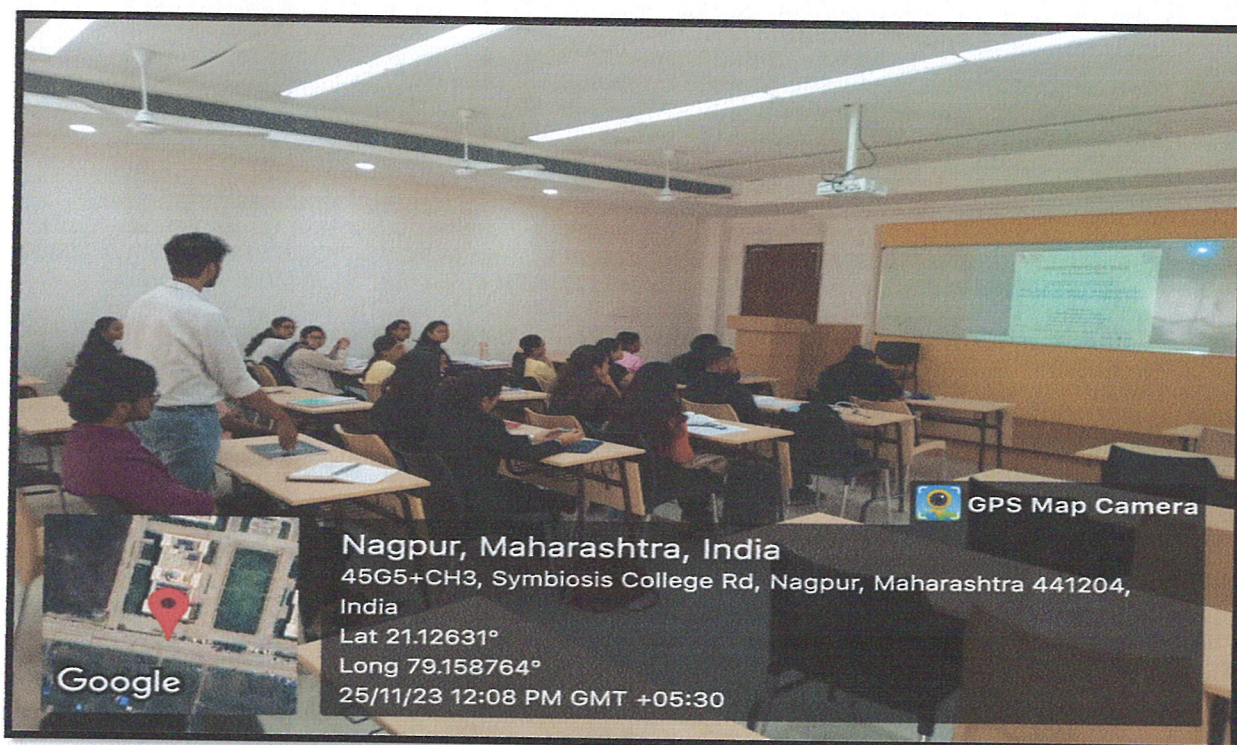

As the discussion evolved, the participants actively engaged, spanning a wide array of topics from the inception of thought of the Preamble in the Constituent Assembly to the enduring relevance of the constitutional vision. The platform provided an inclusive space for all participants to contribute their thoughts and ideas. Central to the discussion was the pivotal role of the Preamble played and how it upheld the vision of the framers of the Constitution.

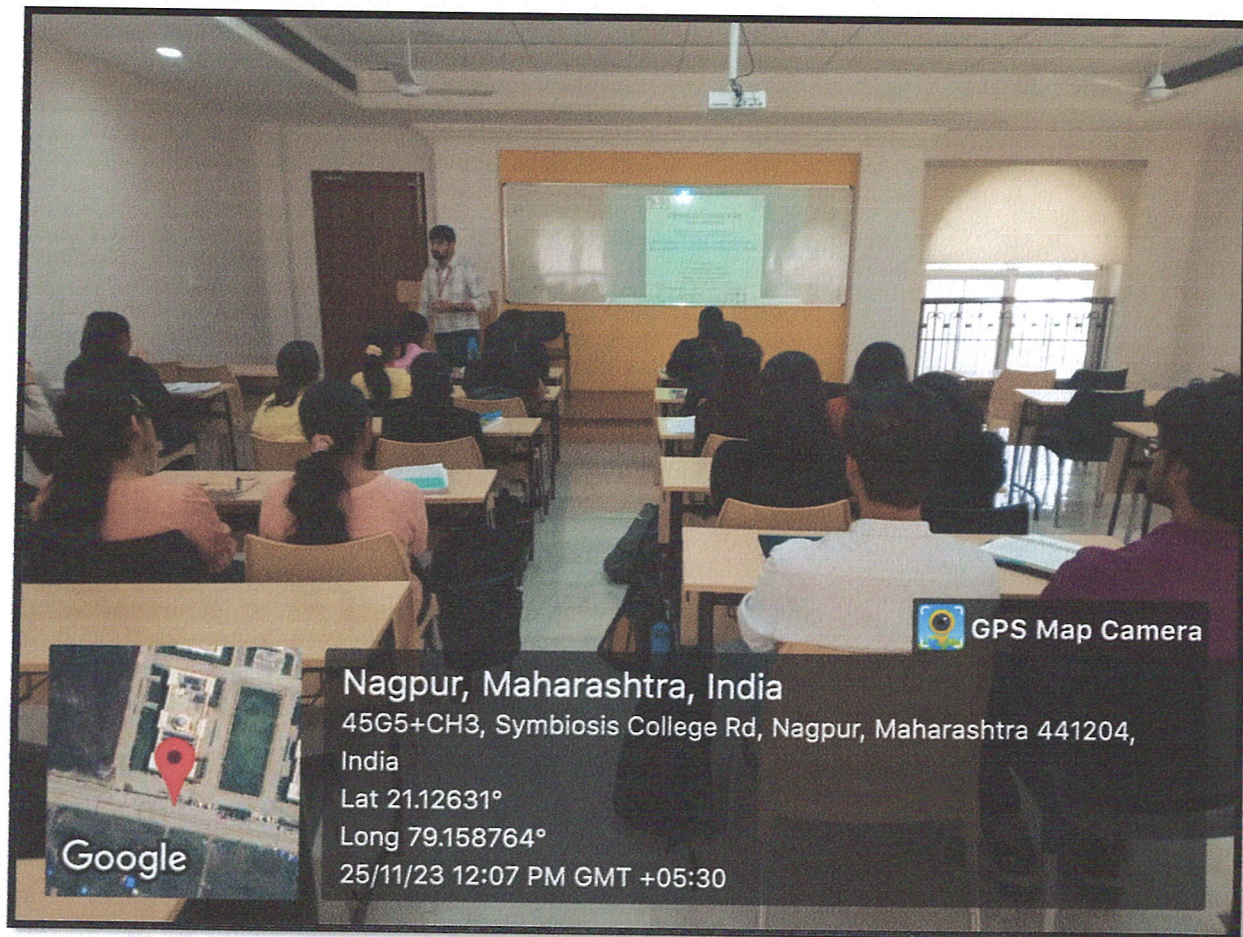

This process carried immense importance, as it facilitated the integration of diverse perspectives, thereby ensuring that the Constitution embodied the values and aspirations of the Founding Fathers of the Indian Constitution. In essence, the role of the Preamble was and is the guiding light of the Constitution, which is followed to date for a better understanding and interpretation of the Constitution.

A formal expression of gratitude marked the culmination of the event, with Ms. Nayantara Bhattacharyya, an LL.M. student and member of the Research and Publication Cell at SLS Nagpur, acknowledging the active participation of all attendees. She highlighted their dedicated engagement with the Preamble and its constitutional vision and its subsequent relevance in interpreting the current constitution.

In essence, this discussion stood as a remarkable learning opportunity for the students, enabling them to broaden their horizons when interpreting legal provisions with a more comprehensive perspective. Guided by the capable direction of our Director, Dr. Sukhvinder Singh Dari, the event's organization was a resounding success, promising to be a valuable experience for all participants involved.
